Enter Berowne.

Ber. O my good knaue Coſtard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. I pray you ſir, How much carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Ber. What is a remuneration?
Coſt. Marrie ſir, halfe pennie farthing.
Ber. O, why then three farthings worth of Silke.
Caſt. I thanke your worſhip, God be wy you.
Ber. O ſtay ſlaue, I muſt imploy thee;
As thou wilt my fauour, good my knaue,
Doe one thing for me that I ſhall intreate.
Clow. When would you haue it done ſir?
Ber O this after-noone.
Clo. Well, I will doe it ſir: Fare you well.
Ber. O thou knoweſt not what it is.
Clow. I ſhall know ſir, when I haue done it.
Ber. Why villaine thou muſt know firſt.
Clo. I will come to your worſhip to morrow morning.
Ber. It muſt be done this after-noone:
Harke ſlaue, it is but this;
The Princes comes to hunt heere in the Parke,
And in her traine there is a gentle Ladie:
When tongues ſpeak ſweetly then they name her name,
And Roſaline they call her, aske for her:
And to her whyte hand ſee thou doe commend
This ſeal'd-vp counſaile, There's thy guerdon: goe.
Clow. Gardon, O ſweet gardon, better then remuneration, a leuenpence-farthing better: moſt ſweet gardon. I will doe it ſir in print: gardon, remuneration. Exit.
Ber. O, and I forſooth in loue,
I that haue beene loues whip?
A verie Beadle to a humorous ſigh: A Criticke,
Nay, a night-watch Conſtable.
A domineering pedant ore the Boy,
Then whom no mortall ſo magnificent.
This wimpled, whyning, purblinde waward Boy,
This ſignior Iunios gyant dwarfe Don Cupid,
Regent of Loue-rimes, Lord of folded armes,
Th'annointed ſoueraigne of ſighes and groanes;

Liedge

Liedge of all loyterers and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Placcats, King of Codpeeces,
Sole Emperator and great generall
Of trotting Parritors (O my little heart)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And weare his Colours like a Tumblers hoope.
What? I loue, I ſue, I ſeeke a wife,
A woman that is like a Germaine Cloake,
Still a repairing: euer out of frame,
And neuer going a right, being a Watch:
But being watcht, that it may ſtill goe right.
Nay, to be periurde, which is worſt of all:
And among three, to loue the worſt of all,
A whitly wanton, with a veluet brow.
With two pitch balls ſtucke in her face for eyes.
I, and by heauen one that will doe the deede,
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her guard
And I to ſigh for her, to watch for her,
To pray for her, go to: it is a plague
That Cupid will impoſe for my neglect,
Of his almighty dreadfull little might.
Well. I will loue, write, ſigh, pray, ſue grone,
Some men muſt loue my Lady, and ſome Ione.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princeſſe, a Forreſter, her Lad Lords.

Qu. Was that the King that ſpurd his horſe f
Againſt the ſteepe vpriſing of the hill?
Boy. I know not, but I thinke it was not he.
Qu. Who ere a was, a ſhew'd a mounting mi
Well Lords to day we ſhall haue our diſpatch,
On Saturday we will returne to France.
Then Forreſter my friend, Where is the Buſh,
That we muſt ſtand and play the murtherer in?